Now is the time to attempt to make the British people understand what the working-class leaders on the Continent think about war and preparation for war. For our wage-earning classes are now roused, and will lace facts which they have too long ignored. It has not been their fault if they have not seen these things long ago; the blame lies mainly at the door of their official leaders. This spring, when the delegates from the Continent came to the Trades Union Congress at Bradford, one of the foreign speakers was Vandervelde, the Belgian Socialist leader, who has now been chosen to present his country s case before the United States of America. One passage of Vandervelde s speech at Bradford created a half-scandalized amusement among the audience. He told his British friends, in blunt but friendly words, that it would do them no harm to introduce more intelligence into the Labour Party. A Swiss Socialist, with whom I was conversing only a fortnight before the outbreak of this war, remarked to me that British Trades Unionism was still running almost on the old lines of fifty years ago, and that its worst weakness was its conservatism. British Labour Leaders arc at the present day almost incredibly ignorant of what is being done on the Continent; but they remain perfectly well satisfied in their ignorance, and therefore the rank and file of the Labour Party suffer too often from the blindness of their leaders. The Workers and War. This extreme insularity, this wilful ignorance on the part of the leaders, has very deeply influenced the British Labour attitude towards...
