It consists of two parts, a Grammar and a Composition, which should be studied together. While each part is complete in itself, constant inter-reference welds the two into a unit. In many instances the same subjects are treated in both parts, in the one rather from the side of theory, in the other more directly from the side of practice. It is believed that this dual arrangement makes each part more logical, more practical, and more pedagogical. The lessons both in the Grammar and in the Composition are largely inductive. From usage as seen in sentences and in selections the pupil is led to develop the principles of correct speaking and effective writing. Rules and definitions are made clear before they are stated. As valuable knowledge comes only from doing, many examples and illustrative exercises are provided. Where practicable these examples are given in contrast, that the pupil by comparison...
