Reviews

Definitely one of the better publication I have got possibly read. It really is writter in basic phrases and not difficult to understand. You wont sense monotony at anytime of your respective time (that's what catalogs are for about if you request me).

As he was promoted to Public School No. 64 from the school which he attended he was admitted to the class. E. R., like some of his friends, is a miniature fatalist. He told an interested visitor, who questioned him as to how he was admitted to-the class, that it was fate that he was chosen. The particular evening that he was discovered was a Sunday on which he was indifferent about attending the Children s Hour. He had decided to remain at home, but his older brother urged him to go, saying, You may have an interesting time. You never can tell what may happen. It may do you good. Well, said E. R., you see if I hadn t gone I may never have been chosen for this class. A bright aggressive looking boy entered the principal s office one afternoon, saying, Mr. Grady, have you room in your school for a bright 6 A boy? Whereupon Mr. Grady asked, Where is the boy? and Why do you wish to know? P. P. said that although he attended another school, he lived in the district of Public School 64. He had heard that there were classes for children of excellent record and his report card showed an A, A, (excellent in work and behavior) record ever since he had attended school. The mental test showed his intelligence quotient to be 138 and so P. P. was entered in the new class....
