Excerpt: . . . 29th, just before ye day broke, being in ye same latitude in which they were found (for ye vessel lay like a log on ye water) ye wind being then at East South East and East N. E. blowing excessive hard, and ye sails furl'd, scudding before it; ye vessel shipt a sea which carried all upon deck over. We being 14 persons in all, 11 Whites and 3 Negroes, viz. , Mr. Westbury, a passenger, his wife and two children, a son and a daughter, myself, 6 hands and 3 Negroes. At ye time of ye great seas breaking in there were 8 men upon deck wh were washed away. It broke ye mast midway and ye waist of ye vessel, and carried away ye quarter deck, and broke in ye bulk head of ye cabin. Mr. Miles, Mr. Westbury, his wife and two children and a Negro were in ye cabin, 6 in number, upon which we got ym upon deck as soon as possible (save ye Negro) who was sup-posed to be there drowned, and immediately a 2 sea came and carried away Mr. Westburys wife, but ye other hold were preserved (tho we were 4 in number); as soon as twas possible to recover sense after this sea, ye Master hearing a noise in ye water of some struggling (being just about day dawning), and finding twas two men who held by ye main sheet, all possible help was got...
